Peace search
urged on USA

Editor, Intelligencer Journal:

The visit of Pope Paul VI was to say the least, a chance for us to rededicate ourselves to the cause of peace in the world. President Johnson and other officials of the government should open more than one ear to these pleas.

The Pope's message is not even an echo yet, but what are we doing about it? Dean Rusk has just come up with the statement that "the obstacle to peace lies in Hanoi and Peking."

Shall we count the number of wars we are directly involved in and compare them with the Chinese? What is this pointless talk of the Communists discrediting our CIA and other officials overseas? Why don't we show some interest in the people of other countries? Why always this divine duty to stop communism without real interest for the people? Why doesn't the government turn over a new leaf and search for peace rather than seeking some one to blame our wars on?
